

A new way to explore jobs online

THE most obvious way to start a search for employment is to jump online. That said, there are so many websites that aim to please yet only add to the confusion by leading you through a series of menus, options and tabs only to disappoint.

Company Explorers is slightly different. Their site, www.companyexplorers.com, attempts to include more options and connections in a more user friendly interface. The website has a comprehensive list of companies, jobs and employment services all in the UK.

Adding to the site's versatility is the ability to compare your employment experiences with other users and discover what's out there.

Since thousands of companies and agencies have signed up, taking a quick survey allows users to find out how their work assignments compare with others in the UK.

It is also possible to explore who is the best in an industry to ensure you are getting the service you deserve. As a first port of call, the website may help cut out unnecessary search time and point a user towards the right track with less frustration.

Along with employers, numerous tax, banking and travel services are listed so there is little left uncovered. The registration process is quite basic and more importantly free and secure so there are no catches.

For an interactive online resource covering detailed information about individual companies, agencies and services, this site is a first.
